Background: The returning time of inpatient specimen analysis is usually slow because phlebotomists deliver all the collected specimens at the end of their work cycle. In addition, manual specimen reception further delays the reporting time and imposes a heavy workload on the technical staff, thus compromising effectiveness. Therefore, we have created an automated specimen reception system to tackle testing delays and enhance the efficiency and quality of specimen collection and handling.
Methods: In May 2015, the pre-analytical processing of inpatient samples was renovated. We automated the specimen reception in parallel with barcode printing and introduced pneumatic tubes to deliver samples for routine chemistry tests. We compared the reporting time of the automated system with that of the manual system and analyzed the distribution pattern of the specimens according to handling time.
Results: The median reporting time was advanced by 41 minutes, from 09:33 AM to 08:52 AM for the manual and automated reception, respectively. Moreover, with the reduction in hands-on time, the blood specimens reached the laboratory immediately after phlebotomy, thereby improving the processing efficiency by spreading out the interval during which the specimens arrived in the laboratory. Additionally, the new system allowed the identification of the phlebotomist who collected the specimens and tracking the specimens from collection to test result.
Conclusions: With the introduction of our automatic reception system, the reporting time was considerably reduced. Therefore, the satisfaction of the clinician and the technical staff was improved.

Key Words: Automated reception, Inpatient laboratory, Reporting time, Workflow

Do not overheat. It can cause ulcers or sorrows to the throat, bringing away the tissue of the esophagus, leading to bleeding, pain and swallowing problems. In many cases, it is possible to effectively treat the condition with these remedies, note Mayo Clinic. Gastric acid can restrain the esophagus to the point that it becomes difficult to swallow. Let the heated stain remove the slide for 5 minutes. Common risk factors include: obesity hernia hiatal pregnancy scleroderma problems emptying stomach lifestyle factors that can contribute to worsen the conditions of stomach acid include smoke, drink alcoholic and caffeinated drinks, eat large or late meals and eating Fat or spicy foods. Treatment for Gerdif Visit your doctor due to high symptoms of stomach or Gerd acid, they probably recommend trying lifestyle changes and over-the-counter treatments first. ATTENTION: acid alcohol is flammable, therefore, use it carefully from a flame open Longer when the smear is thin. Wash the stain with clean water. Treating stomach burning and stomach acidity problems is a condition of discomfort that almost almost Experiences from time. The staining techniques Ziehl-Neelsen have thus been developed.The main purpose of this staining Ã¨ is to differentiate bacteria into fast acid and non-acid groups.This method is used for those micro-organisms that do not color with the simple staining method or Gram, in particular the member of the genus Mycobacterium, are resistant and can only be viewed by acid staining. D-Fast StainWhen the streak is colored with carbol fuchsin, it solubilizes the lipoidal material present in the cell wall of the mycobacterial but through  heat , carbol fuchsin penetrates further through the lipoidal wall and enters the cytoplasm. In the most serious cases¹, the damage can² change the tissues in your esophagus, which can eventually lead to esophageal cancer, Mayo Clinic reports. This results in heartburn. In some cases, stronger prescription versions¹ of these drugs or surgical interventions may be needed.GERDA complications Even if the GERD and the discomfort of aciditÃ  gastric can be relatively minor, may lead to more severe conditions¹ if not treated or not managed effectively. This method is also called Ziehl-Neelsen staining techniques. Other symptoms of GERD include: Burning pain in the chest that can feel moreÃ² defective after a hearty meal Problem swallowing Regurgitated sensation of a lump in your throat that makes swallowing difficult Causes of GERDLdue primarily to GERD Ã¨ frequent or chronic acid reflux. Neelsen in 1883 utilized ZiehlÃ₂ carbol-fuchsin and heat then discolored with acid alcohol, and against colored with methylene blue. Fixing alcohol: It is recommended when the smear is not Ì prepared with sputum treated with sodium hypochlorite (bleach) and will not be immediately colored. Tuberculosis M.Ã is with bleach and during the staining process. The thermal fixation of untreated sputum will not kill M. M. M.
